To obtain input from other federal agencies, the Office of Management and Budget ( OMB ) established an interagency advisory committee for the ACS in 2000. The committees major purpose was to coordinate the review of questions to be included in the ACS. Because of the committees limited focus, the Census Bureau established the ACS Federal Agency Information 6 Program in 2003, responding to a recommendation we made. This program is designed to assist each federal agency that has a current or potential use for ACS data to achieve a smooth transition to using the ACS. From its beginnings in the mid-1990s, the Census Bureaus development Outstanding Issues plan for the ACS was designed to ensure that the ACS would satisfactorily Jeopardize ACSs replace the Decennial Census long form as the major source of small geographic area data. In our review of the plan, we found that the Census Replacement of the Bureau, as well...
